CEO Kasper Lund Nødgaard says:

"I started as an analyst in Dataprocés nine years ago. At that time, I worked with the analyses and specialist knowledge that helped the municipalities create value through data. Today, the same knowledge has been translated into software solutions used by 90 of Denmark's 98 municipalities.

For me, this year's result is a picture of the journey the company has been on over the past many years. We have gradually turned specialist knowledge into software and software for recurring subscription revenue.

During the year, we developed seven new software solutions and invested in new specialist areas. These investments have only contributed to the year's result to a limited extent, but we have previously shown how specialist knowledge can be translated into software and recurring revenue. Therefore, we have great expectations that the investments we make today will contribute to Dataprocés' development in the coming years."

Dataprocés currently works with 90 of Denmark's 98 municipalities and continued the development of the company's subscription business in 2025/26. The number of active SaaS subscriptions increased from 171 to 206 at the end of the financial year, while ARR grew to DKK 28.6 million.

The investments in 2021/22 and 2022/23 laid the foundation for the growth the company subsequently experienced in 2023/24 and 2024/25. In 2025/26, Dataprocés has taken the first steps in the next investment phase through the development of seven new software products, the strengthening of the organization and investments in new specialist areas.

At the end of the financial year, equity amounted to DKK 52.9 million, and the equity ratio was 60.9%.

After the end of the financial year, Dataprocés announced a strategic partnership with Lexis & Rother Partnerschaftsgesellschaft as well as the acquisition of selected activities in Germany. The initiative strengthens Dataprocés' position in the German market and supports the company's long-term growth ambitions.
